Pyramid Hill Sculpture Park & Museum is pleased to announce that Sarah Templeton Wilson has joined the leadership team as Pyramid Hill's first Development Director, and Zach Robinson has joined as the new Program Manager. Their arrival comes at an opportune time as the park is celebrating its 25th Anniversary during 2022.

"We are thrilled to welcome Sarah and Zach to the team. Their combined expertise will help Pyramid Hill achieve a new level of success. This milestone year will be a whole community celebration," explains Bryan W. Knicely, Executive Director of Pyramid Hill.

Templeton Wilson has an extensive career in both art and development. A Miami University graduate from the College of Creative Arts, Sarah also has a Masters in Photographic Preservation and Collection Management from Ryerson University and the George Eastman House and is a doctoral candidate in Interdisciplinary Arts at Ohio University. She spent her summers growing up at Chautauqua Institution and credits that with developing her love for the arts.

She comes to Pyramid Hill after a career serving all four of Miami University's Campuses and most recently was part of the Cincinnati Ballet fundraising team that completed a $30.8 million capital campaign. "I am very excited to return to Hamilton and be a part of Pyramid Hill's future success. This is an exciting year for the Park and the City of Hamilton, and I am looking forward to working with such a passionate community," says Templeton Wilson.

Robinson joins us from the world of Theatre Administration. He spent the last 3 years with Know Theatre of Cincinnati as the Artistic and Community Relations Manager and brings his festival and program expertise to Pyramid Hill. "This park is so absolutely beautiful," Robinson shares. "It steals your heart from the moment you enter. I'm excited to bring that exhilarating feeling to this community with a variety of new and familiar programs." He is a recent transplant into the Hamilton area and looks forward to exploring it more, once the weather is warmer.
