“This day is such an important time for Pyramid Hill’s mission. We exist to appreciate art in nature, so to be able to celebrate Arbor Day, Earth Day, and International Sculpture Day all on the same day is exceptional.” explains Bryan W. Knicely Pyramid Hill’s Executive Director. “We have so many great local partners that have helped us make this celebration a fun family-centered event; Cincinnati Public Radio is providing seed packets to the first 100 cars and Municipal Arborist, Urban Forestry and the Hamilton Advisory Tree Board is providing saplings. We invite everyone to come “hang out” with art, in nature!”

Pyramid Hill’s Art & Earth Day celebration has programming scheduled throughout the entire day. We will have local experts from Miami University will be leading the free programming including guided tree tours, bird hikes, Ancient Sculpture Museum guided tours, yoga classes, and multiple kids’ workshops throughout the day.

The “en plein air” art competition is open to all and juried by local artist and educator Daniel Bonham. The University of Cincinnati’s DAAP program students will be installing original works for an artist walk throughout the park, where patrons will be able to ask them questions directly.

Guests will be able to buy food at the park from Jen’s Hot Tamales food truck. The day will be ending with a special “Volunteer Appreciation Happy Hour” at the Grand Pavilion in honor of National Volunteer Week, where you will be able to meet our new staff members.
